The Dildy Vat Near Howard County Capitol Is Wrecked.

ONE MAN ARRESTED

Bloodhound Leads Officers From Vat To Home of Lee Waters.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 16.—The dipping vat at Temperanceville, on the Nashville and Center Point highway, was destroyed by a dynamite explosion early Tuesday night, the explosion occurring between 7:30 and 8:00 o'clock. This is the third dipping vat destroyed with dynamite in the Nashville section of the county recently, the Williams and Tollett vats having been destroyed on the night of Thursday, August 1.

Lee Waters, a young farmer living on the George Merrill farm, near Temperanceville, was arrested early Wednesday morning by Sheriff Roy Millwee and Deputy Oscar Reese, after a bloodhound, which had been brought from Hot Springs for the purpose during the night, had led the officers to Waters' home. The officers also followed tracks from the vat to Waters home, and the tracks are reported to be identical with tracks made by shoes owned by Waters. After his arrest, Waters was carried before Justice O. A. Tynall, where he waived arraignment and was bound to the grand jury under bond of $1,000, which he furnished. Waters denied to the officers that he had any connection with the destruction of the vat.

No arrests have yet been made in connection with the dynamiting of the Williams and Tollett vats, but an effort will be continued to apprehend the persons who blew up these vats, and the officers have doubled their vigilance in this connection.

The dipping vat has been burning rather smoothly all over the country for some time, according to H. B. Aldridge, U. S. Inspector in charge of the work in Howard county, except for the blowing of the vats in this section. It is not believed that the forces opposed to the dipping program have any connection whatever with the dynamiting of the vats, opposition leaders openly condemning such tactics.

The fliers took off at 5:55 yesterday afternoon at Spokane and plan to fly across the continent from Cheyenne.

Atlanta Man Is Steady In Denial

Accused Killer Firm In Reiterating Knows Nothing of Crime.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Persistent questioning has failed to shake Chas. L. Underwood, alleged slayer of Mrs. Bertha May Powell who was found dying in her bed yesterday in his denial that he knows anything of the crime.

A few hours after the 15-year-old woman was found in bed with her throat slashed a coroner's jury ordered Underwood held to the grand jury on a first-degree murder charge.

The man, when arrested, readily confessed to police his long association with the woman, saying that the quarrel between them yesterday resulted from his affections for another woman. He told police that in the argument she had threatened to kill herself but denied they had had any physical encounter.

Where Tragedy Ended Holiday Cruise.

Grim evidence of tragedy, this mast projecting above the water was all that remained visible of an excursion steamer which sank after a collision with a tug in the harbor at Astend, Belgium. Ten lives were lost and many persons were injured when the excursion craft, cut almost in two, swiftly went down. Scores of passengers, grouped on the landward side of the vessel to wave farewell to friends on shore, were swept into the water without a chance of reaching the lifeboats.

Cement Plant Will Start At Capacity

Expect Stream of Cement
From Big Plant On September 1.

OKAY, Aug. 16.—Another section of the large cement plant of the Arkansas Portland Cement Company here, this being the raw mill, which is now running full time. Only two of the major sections of the plant remain to be put in operation, the kiln and the finish mill. The kiln is being tested and heated preparatory to starting it on Saturday of next week. The last machines to be put in operation are the large finish mills, which are now expected to be started on September 1, after which time there will be a continuous flow of cement from the plant.

The largest blast of dynamite yet used in the quarry of the company here, and perhaps the largest single blast ever set off in this part of the state, was touched off Wednesday, when more than a car load of dynamite was exploded at one blast, the explosion being felt for several miles around and uncovering a large amount of the limestone. Smaller shots are being made at all times of the day in the quarries, and the company has built a fence around this property and placed danger signs around to protect the public from any accident which might occur. The public is being barred from the quarries at all times because of the danger there.

R. J. Morse of Denver, vice-president of the Arkansas Portland Cement Co.; M. O. Matthews, Adm. Ok., treasurer, and O. A. Bayless, Adm., chief engineer, are here witnessing the starting and testing of the machines, in addition to the forces of the company stationed here.

Clothes Make the Man—Safe

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—Clothes do not always make a man. But they have other advantages.

Harry Mitchell, aged 57, found this out for himself the other day when he was thrown 30 feet into the air from a milk-wagon when it collided with another car.

Mitchell landed on his neck. He was taken to the hospital where doctors were bewildered that the man had sustained no injuries.

They were not long kept in doubt. When Mitchell was disrobed for examination it was found that he wore an overcoat, three suits of clothes and two sets of heavy underwear. When he landed on the pavement he merely bounced and came down lightly.

Guardsmen Enjoy Watermelon Feed

To Company 'A' for Festival Work.

Lindbergh Asked for Aid Because of His Wealth

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—About 12 thousand letters in twenty different languages are translated each year by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, according to E. S. Wahlen, secretary.

Although most of the letters are purely business routine of ordering and inquiries, there are a large number which are more personal. Hundreds are received each year for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, which are a combination of praises for his bravery and goodness and supplications for help. The chief reason for these, said Wahlen, is that Lindbergh's refusal to accept large sums of money from admirers makes folks think that he must be immeasurably wealthy.

Pet Goose Succeeds In Foiling Poultry Robbery

Board of Education Favors Unit Plan

District 19 and Columbus
Schools Will Be Merged.

The County Board of Education met in session at Washington Wednesday to discuss the consolidation of District 19 and the Columbus schools under the new unit plan. Some opposition had developed to the proposed merger of the schools and both sides were out in force to attend the board hearing.

After going into the matter at considerable length, the board decided the consolidation was advisable, inasmuch as at a moderate cost it would give school children in the consolidated district school advantages not now enjoyed. To this ruling opponents of the play objected and served notice they would carry the matter into the courts.

The county board is composed of H. R. Holt, J. W. Butler, D. L. Paisley, N. P. O'Neil and H. P. Stephens.

The affidavits were filed after the death of a three year old child has caused an investigation and reports made to authorities that all safety devices on the cars were wired up and heavily charged with electricity.

All of the accused were released on bond of $250 each. It was stated by E. S. Mayers, assistant to the vice president, that the wiring of the safety devices was done to prevent derailment of the cars from bricks and other obstacles placed on the track by striking curmen.

The huge air liner carrying 20 passengers, was reported near the Urals at 7:30 this morning, Eastern standard time, when it radioed Friedrichshafen that all was well on board.

The Zeppelin is making excellent time, having covered 2100 miles, approximately 7000 mile flight, maintaining an average speed of slightly more than 60 miles per hour.

Reports were frequent yesterday of the liner's passage over Europe but will be more meager today as the big ship steadily approaches the vast tundras for the plains in the arctic are not hospitable to habitation and reports of the ship's passage are expected to be infrequent.

Kip Rhinelander Wants A Divorce

New Yorker Wants Free
From Negro Woman
He Married.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Aug. 16.—(AP)—A divorce suit on behalf of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, scion of a socially prominent New York family, charged that his mulatto wife, Alice Jones Rhinelander, had "taken advantage of his youth and inexperience" in persuading him to marry her, was on file here Thursday.

It was Rhinelander's second suit to obtain a divorce from the daughter of a New Rochelle, N. Y., negro coachman. Several years ago, a similar case in New York failed to bring him a decree. Since then they have been living apart, his wife receiving a separate maintenance.

In his new complaint, Rhinelander charged that the defendant by her artifices and wiles so dominated him that he was led into the marriage ceremony. He claimed she caused him to be estranged from his family and friends, causing him "great humiliation."

To prevent a complete physical breakdown, Rhinelander contended that he was forced to separate from her.

The complaint stated that there was no community property. The couple married in New Rochelle, N. Y., in 1924.

Blood transfusions and serums failed to save the child's life, the father furnishing blood for three transfusions.

As told by the captain of the team, Winston Cobb, they not only won the State championship but defeated the champion girls' team to win a prize trip to the National Dairy show this fall at St. Louis. This final competition was put on before a vast crowd of adults as well as 4-H club boys and girls, on the University of Arkansas campus, Fayetteville, during Farmers' week.

The boys' real work of County Agent Lynn Smith, who trained them and coached all their efforts for state competition. They were also given a good deal of praise by George W. Ware, assistant director of the State Experiment Farm here, who was one of the judges in the district but not the state contest.

Ware Home From West

Mr. Ware, who appeared on the luncheon program with Tolbot Field, in charge of program, related his experiences on a month's tour of Western experiment farms, ranging all the way from Arkansas to California. He said that the more he traveled, the more he appreciated the well arranged state farm, he believed, than any of a score or more he and Mrs. Ware visited while on their tour.

Mr. Field also called on W. Homer Pigg, secretary of the Southwest Arkansas Fair Association, for a report on the progress of arrangements for this year's fair, which is only five weeks away. ## Old Age Pensions

THE growth of public doles in England, with their ill effects, has caused a sharp reaction lately against social welfare work in America. We do not want to see this nation overwhelmed with socialistic ventures which rise out of sentiment rather than a practical need. But before prejudice swings us too far it would be well to consider a speech which Congressman I. Sirovich, of New York, made before the House of Representatives last December.

The congressman, who broadcast his address in pamphlets to the newspapers, made the following appeal for old age pensions:

"Formerly, out of a total of 100,000 people 41,000 would reach the age of 65. Today 52,000 of such an original number will live to be 65. Because of the increased expectancy of life, the number of persons 65 years of age and over in the United States has been steadily increasing, and the consequences are that while those fathers and mothers are living longer than before the economic and industrial conditions that confront them in our nation have made it impossible for them to find work, and the only way they can subsist and save themselves from penury, hunger and want, is for them to join the great caravan that finally wends its way over the hill to the poorhouse."

The trouble with almshouses, Dr. Sirovich discloses, is the trouble with most charitable bureaus. "The total maintenance cost of all these institutions," he declares, "amounts to $28,740,535, which represented a per capita investment of $1,752.09 and a food maintenance of $439.76 for each inmate. Of the 2,183 almshouses studied 1,909, or 87 per cent of them had less than 100 inmates. To determine how this money was spent study disclosed that 32 per cent went as administrative expense, 38 per cent for operation of the plant, while 30 per cent went for inmates' maintenance. In other words, out of every dollar contributed to the almshouse 70 cents went for administrative and operative expense, the so-called overhead, while 30 cents went directly for the old fathers and mothers."

"It costs the counties in Montana $65.98 a month to take care of an old inmate. You can take care of four men in their own homes for that amount. . . . In Pennsylvania it was found that they can take care of three old mothers and fathers in their own homes, for the amount of money that is costs to take care of one person in an institution."

The most impressive part of the congressman's plea is his common-sense solution of the problem. He is asking congress to authorize a certain sum of money "as a contribution to any state that is willing to apply the principle of old-age pensions to its citizens, which is optional with the state to accept."

That would put social welfare work on the same footing as federal aid for good roads and agricultural education.

Books and War

THERE has been a flood of "realistic" war books lately; novels that take the glamor and the romance off of the fighting and depict the World war for what it, like every war really was—a terrible, hellish affair of pain, filth, monotony and despair.

Friends of world peace have been vastly encouraged by these books, hoping that they would rob war of its attractions for those adventurous young men who can always be counted on when the drums begin to beat. On the face of it, it would seem that this hope should be justified. And yet—

A woman novelist recently wrote a realistic novel about the Civil war. She handled it without gloves; pictured it as a frightful blunder, in which no one won any glory and in which few even displayed real courage. Her book was bitter, disillusioned, incisive.

The novelist has a son, aged 16. He read his mother's book, pondered over it for a day or so—and then ran away from home and enlisted in the U. S. Cavalry.

A Change for the Better

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—When an ordinary person dies it's just too bad and his surviving relatives meet the funeral expenses. But when a member of Congress passes to his reward his death and burial are expensive for the federal treasury.

When a Congressman dies an adjournment is taken in respect to the departed brother, resolutions of sorrow are drawn up, a committee of 10 or 15 men is appointed to escort the remains home, a Sunday is set aside to eulogize the dead man both in the Congressional Record and a special volume and the bill may run as high as $23,000. No matter how obscure a member may have been nor how unpopular, he gets all this attention when he is dead.

Of course if a Pacific Coast congressman dies it's pretty expensive. When a California member passed away a few years ago it cost $5335 in railroad fares alone, for there was a committee of 14 and a sergeant-at-arms and one or two miscellaneous attendants, as usual, went along with the party. In such instances it is sometimes difficult to recruit a full committee, but there are usually congressmen who have never been to California and appreciate the free ride with expenses paid. The funeral committee travels in a private car, and if the death comes toward the end of a session the opportunity to serve and do homage enables a member to save considerable mileage.

The initial expense of a member's death comes when the widow is paid $10,000, a year's salary. Each of his clerks, receives a month's salary and the cost of eulogy and issuing special Congressional Records containing the eulogies runs into the thousands. The burial expenses and all incidental expenses of the committee are fair, and although members of the House are limited to a $400 casket there's no limit on Senators.

The records show that it cost $250 to place the late Senator Willis of Ohio in a state bronze casket and inter him in a udylite vault, plus other charges and one of $276.50 for broadcasting the funeral services. The highest price yet paid for a senatorial casket is $2500. Flowers, gloves for pallbearers, limousines and many minor charges make the bill pile up. Cigars, tips, taxis and such matters are charged up by members of the committees.

Last year the Baltimore & Ohio railroad collected $6481 for fares, berths and food in connection with the funeral of the late Senator Jones of New Mexico.

Few ceremonies here are more remarkable than the Sunday eulogies. The Senate eulogizes merely its own, but the House always eulogizes a dead senator, though it may wait until two or three years after his death. The House custom is to eulogize four or five deceased members on the same day, and few attend except those who are to speak. From a half dozen to a score of eulogies are accorded each one.

Sometimes, also, a colleague of the deceased can't wait until eulogy day. In the last session one member took the floor to eulogize a departed colleague whom few had ever heard of. His eulogy, as shown in the Record is crammed with such time-worn phrases as "a grief-stricken yet grateful public," "last full measure of devotion," "the transient life of man," "the mystical problem of life," "the great caravan from whose bourne no traveler ever returns," "his spirit marches down the aisle of eternity," "he stands naked before the great white throne of God" and much more of the same. This is typical of congressional eulogies. Some great ones have been delivered.

Senator Jim Reed's tribute to the late La Follette was a classic, but many are pretty cheap. Those studded with poetry probably are the worst.

Drops More Than Mile Before Opening Chute

FORT WAYNE, Ind., August 15.—(AP)—Six stopwatches timed George Rock, local parachute jumper, when he fell 33 seconds before jerking the rip cord to his chute. The stunt, part of an American Legion air circus at Elkhart, was witnessed by Capt. C. E. Hofstetter of the ordnance department of the United States army. Captain Hofstetter, using the accepted speed of falling bodies as a basis, figured that Rock had dropped 5,500 feet—or more than a mile—before opening his parachute. The accepted record for such a drop, it was said, was 4,400 feet. Rock has been a parachute jumper 12 years.

Once upon a time there was a man with a heavy board who didn't claim to be a cousin of the former czar.

Altho milk production is usually very low at this time of year, George Slaybaugh has some interesting figures. This is his record for the last half of July:

9 Cows produced 146 pounds milk per day for 15 days.

Feed, including cost of pasturage	$23.15
Net profit	$22.65

This profit, from an investment in dairy cows, and with one hours work per day for two milkers. Mr. Slaybaugh has also produced enough feed from his farm this summer to supply his cows all next winter.

"Buy a Bull for Your Grade Herd at the Fair"

This is the slogan which is being used by the dairy cattle department of the Southwest Arkansas Fair, to stir up interest in its big exhibit of cattle, which is to be one of the educational features of the fair, September 23 to 28.

"We believe that our fair can be made of big value to progressive farming, if farmers visitors will look over visiting herds, and arrange for the purchase of breeding stock for use in building up their grade herds," said Superintendent H. H. Huskey today.

"Dairying gives employment to labor throughout the year, uses up crops of hay and grain raised in the farm, builds up the land through the return of manure to the soil, and furnishes the farmer with a monthly income. These are the leading reasons why the fair believes in the dairying business for this community, and we are going to do all we can to encourage it."

All of the breeds of dairy cattle commonly known here will be shown at the fair. The breeds recognized by the fair's premium list include Jerseys and Holsteins. Such a large entry of animals is expected that every bit of stall-room available is expected to be used.

Information about this show and the prizes offered may be obtained by writing to Secretary W. Homer Pigg, of the fair and asking for a premium list.

R. O. The attorney would not reveal their names, but said they were "actuated by under influence."

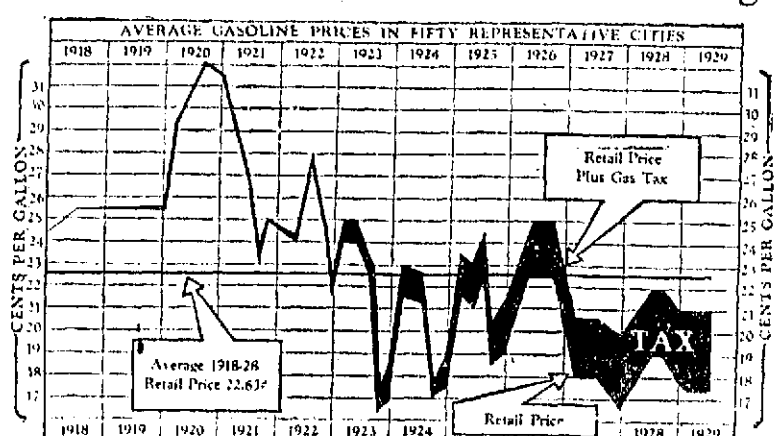

"We have many grounds to ask for a new trial," Ricketts told the newspapers. He claimed to have learned that court spectators had been "planted" to applaud when Prosecutor John Chester completed his final appeal to the jury.

The verdict, it was learned Thursday, did not surprise the bald, middle-aged man who stands in the shadow of the electric chair.

"The jury did not even need to retire so far as I was concerned," Snook told his jailer. "With all that stuff before them (meaning evidence of the most sordid type), I'm surprised that they did."

"Wasn't the trial an awful strain on you?" he was asked.
"No—no strain at all," he replied. "I never had any real interest in what was going on."

Prices In Fifty Cities Show Gasoline Far Below Eleven Year Average

PASSENGER cars, trucks, buses, taxicabs, aircraft, motor boats and stationary engines in growing numbers clamor for more and more gasoline," says the American Petroleum Institute. the most economical means of transportation, all things considered that is available today. You may think you are paying today as much as, or more than, you ever did for gasoline, but it may be because of the gasoline tax. The tax is adding 2 to 6 cents to the price of every gallon you buy. The service station or retail price of gasoline today is well below the average over 11 years."

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 BY NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, pretty and prosperous, has undertaken the care of little Rita Newton, the child of her dearest friend, who has died. Rita's father, Bob, confesses to Molly something of the details of a sordid romance he has had with a girl named Elsie Smith, who has met a violent death. Bob seems caloused and hard, and Molly is disgusted with him.

Molly has written two successful plays. The newest one, called "Sacrifice," has been attacked by the censors. Molly's sensibilities are hurt, but the producer is delighted. The activities of the censors assure the success of the play. Molly, to avoid the hateful controversy, leaves New York, and returns to the apartment in Boston which she shares with little Rita, a nurse and a housekeeper.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIII

Molly had never realized there were so many reporters in Boston. They all wanted to know what she would do if the censors padlocked the theater.

"But the censors couldn't do that!" she protested. "They'd have to get a court order. And it's not a horrid play. The critics were very kind. They liked it very much."

"But what did the censors say?" demanded somebody. (They said it was all six deadly adjectives— "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, in decent and disgusting—that's what the censors said!")

"Damn the censors!" exclaimed Molly.

And some of the papers led with a screaming banner: "DAMN THE CENSORS!"

Second Sensational Play

The story was wired to New York, and appeared on Broadway almost as soon as in Boston. Mr. Durbin, delighted, telephoned his congratulations.

And that evening Jack telephoned, too. He had received Molly's letter, and the ring. He had, also, read the papers.

"Molly dear," he began, without preamble, "you were an awfully sweet little girl to send me that stunning ring. And I want to thank you. It was mighty nice of you."

"I'm glad you liked it," she faltered. "I suppose you're having a fit about the play."

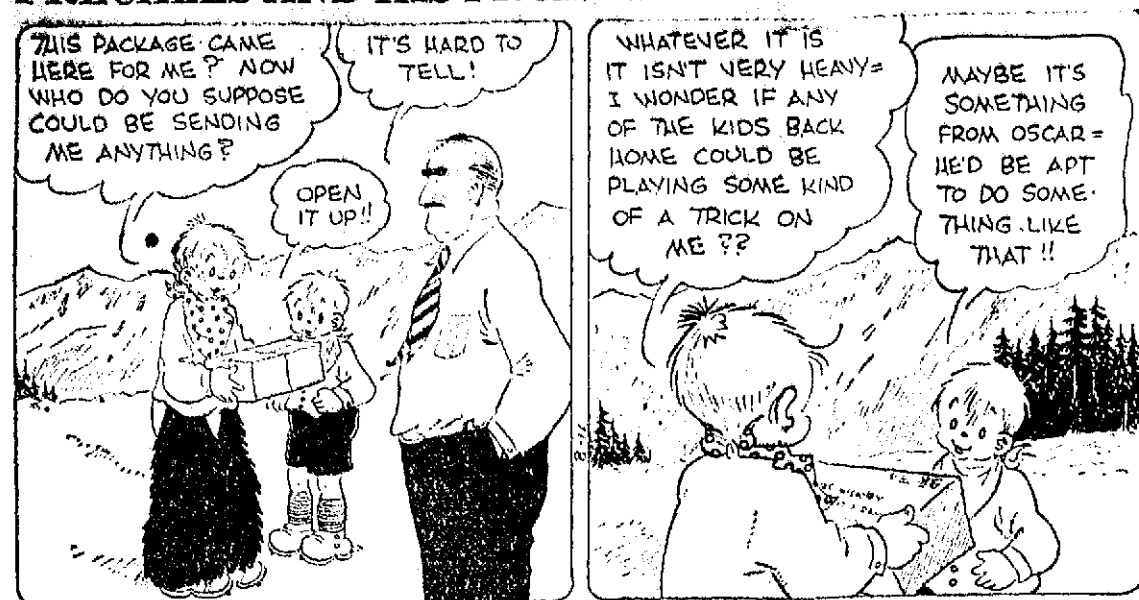

"That was one reason I called," he admitted. "Can't you do something about it, Molly?"

"About what?" she asked blankly.

"The play, of course. What did you think I was talking about?"

"What can I do?"

Plan Refueling Endurance Flight Across U.S.

A trans-continental refueling endurance flight is next on the aviation program. Above is an unusual picture of Captain Ira Eaker, at the controls of a Boeing plane. Eaker and Lieutenant Bernard Thompson, army flyers, are scheduled to take off from San Francisco soon in an attempt to make a round trip flight from the California city to New York and then back to Cleveland, Ohio, to fly over the Cleveland airport during the national air races until forced down. They hope to beat the Jackson-O'Brien refueling record made recently at St. Louis and demonstrate the feasibility of refueling mail planes while en route.

Then there was that wistful little verse of Jessie Rittenhouse: "You came again, but silence had fallen on your heart, And in your eyes were visions That held us still apart, And now I go on hearing The words you did not say, And the kiss you did not give me Burns on my lips today." Then there was that wild sonnet that began: "What lips have kissed, and where, and why, I have forgotten, and what arms . . ."

Molly was growing sleepy. Too sleepy to remember any more. "Anyhow it's a good idea," she reflected drowsily. "I'll make it an anthology of unrequited love. I'll bet a million women would simply eat it up."

But in the morning Molly's enthusiasm had waned. When she was tired or lonely, she was often sentimental. After a good breakfast, she was apt to grow matter-of-fact. Today was going to be a lovely day.

The nurse was leaving early. She would have little Rita to herself until bed-time. They were going down town, and Rita was to have her hair cut. Then they would have luncheon, and go to see Peter Pan. Molly had told Rita about the how children flew around their nursery. And how Wendy flew right out into the night, and fell in love with Peter Pan, and lived, like the fairies, up in a tree. Rita listened and eugger.

"Didn't she have no mama?" she asked.

"Yes, indeed," declared Molly. "But Peter bewitched her, and she forgot all about her mother."

"What's bewitched?"

Molly tried to explain. But Rita shook her curly head.

"Wendy was a naughty girl," she pronounced.

"Why, dear? Because she flew away from her mama?"

Rita nodded, and buried her face in Molly's skirt. It was a childish avowal of love.

"You wouldn't want to fly away from me, would you, dear?"

"No—no!"

Rita hugged Molly's knees ecstatically. "I love you!" she whispered. And Molly's heart, with joy and thankfulness, was filled to overflowing.

It was some time before she happened to see Bob again. He had called frequently to take Rita for a ride in the swan boats, or a walk through the Public Gardens. Once he had taken her to the Aquarium. And another day to Franklin Park, to see the elephants. But Molly happened to have been out on each occasion.

She was writing a novel from the plot of "Sacrifice." Because she fancied she could write better at night, she slept late in the morning, and devoted her afternoons to various things. There was a modern art course at the museum in which she was interested. And another in applied psychology at Harvard.

Harvard, too, and so they were together a great deal. He talked occasionally of his mother now. Her heart was beginning to fail, the doctors said. Perhaps she could not live another year. Red was very good to her, buying any number of absurd and loving gifts.

One day it was a lavender shawl, and the next day a gay French breakfast service. He found pomegranates for her, and avocado pears and sweet ripe figs. He would go down to the markets, to get the Italian cheese she particularly liked. And drive into the country, for tender young broilers, and green vegetables, fresh from the gardens.

He never had any money now, and Molly suspected that he was spending it all on his mother. She tried to think of some way she might help him. His specialists' bills, she knew were enormous. But she was afraid of offending to make any suggestions.

Her money she reflected, had never enabled her to help the people she loved most. It had actually kept her from marrying Jack. It had alienated her mother completely. She was never able to do anything for poor Rita, nor for Ruth. Only for little Rita.

And now—with the way Bob was acting—she was beginning to wonder if anything could ever happen by which she might lose her darling child.

Bob had reformed of late. Molly had been to a concert one afternoon and walked home, for the exercise. Bob and Rita were returning at the same time.

"The best I can do," thought Molly, "is ask him in for tea. After all, he's Rita's father."

They sat in the drawing room, fragrant with flowers, and honey now with books and magazines, and lamps with parchment shades.

Bob's eyes were brighter now, and his skin was clearer. He seemed more alert, and straight-forward. Molly could almost forgive him for Elsie Smith. He seemed actually like a different person.

"Been on the wagon," he offered, "ever since Elsie's death."

"You'd better stay on," advised Molly. "I've never seen you look so well."

He filled his pipe and smiled contentedly.

"I'm being an exemplary citizen," he declared. "Saving money, and everything."

"It's high time," she observed.

"Now, don't be nasty, Molly."

"You don't know what I've been up against the last few years," Rita was up against a lot too," she said. "And it didn't make it any easier for her, when you started to drink."

"I know," he admitted. "I've been an awful egg. But you're not going to hold that up against me all my life, are you Molly?"

"Oh, I don't know," she parried. "I'm apt to."

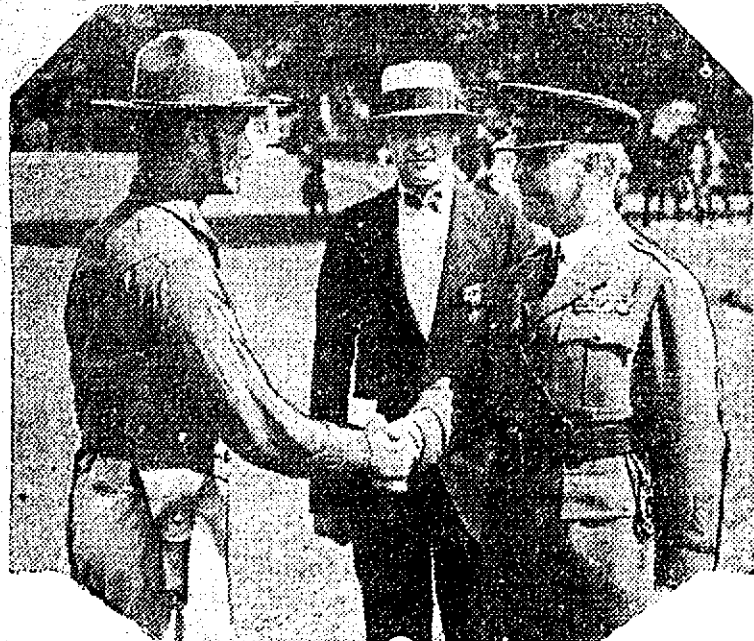

"But that's not fair. Listen, Molly . . ."

He leaned, and took her hand. And she noticed what white, horrid hands he had. Jack's were brown. And Red's were red and homely, with hair sticking up on his knuckles. . . . But Bob's were white and horrid.

She tried to draw her fingers away.

Whitehead and Steele Stage Pretty Boxing Bout At Fair Park Last Night

Whitehead, Substituting for Tillman, Is Rare Handful for Oil Field Worker and Clever Exhibition Results When the Two Hook Up.

There was a boxing card on at Fair Park last night, one of the weekly shows staged here under the auspices of the Legion. Jimmie Tillman, of Atlanta, had been matched to box Jack Steele, the Smackover acetylene welder, but at the last minute Promoter Robbins had a chance to get Word Whitehead, of Shreveport, to meet Steele and immediately hooked the slim, fast-swinging and plumb willing scrapper for the card.

As a prize fight, the main event was lacking, but as a boxing bout it was one of the prettiest exhibitions ever seen here. Both men are fast and clever and each possesses a wholesome respect for the fists of the other. At a result, fans were treated to a sight of two finished fighting men travelling at a dizzy rate of speed and exhibiting every trick of the seasoned boxer who fights clean. It will be a pleasure to see those birds get together again over the 12-round route.

The crowd in attendance was small, making the second card on which the promoter has suffered a loss. And that part of the crowd which remained away has cause to regret it. For the preliminaries were worth more than the price of admission. In one of the prelims, "Kid" Bradley, Smackover, took on young Lamb, local boy, weakened him with two or three stiff wallop to the heart and floored him with a right to the jaw. The bell saved Lamb once, but the next time he got his jaw in front of one he was all out. On his feet, but helpless and his seconds tossed a towel in the ring to save him needless punishment.

In short, it was a fair show—more for four-bits than you ever had offered you in boxing anywhere else.

"Red" Dean, from Cotton Valley, La., refereed preliminary events, while "Tex" Leavelle, was third man in the final. Dean issued a formal challenge to Jack Matlock and they will likely be hooked up some time soon.

"Red Rain" Damages Village In Manchuria

PEKING, Aug. 16.—A torrential fall of "red rain" in Manchuria has almost destroyed the village of Fuyu, not far from Mukden, the Chinese newspapers here report.

Pools of blood-red water formed in the streets, and the rain discolored houses. The Chinese inhabitants explained the red rain by saying that some superhuman huntsman had shot a dragon in the sky.

Crown Princess of Tennis

"Like mother, like daughter" caused a family racket to draw a lot of attention in the eastern women's tennis championships at Rye, N. Y., the other day. Above you see Dorothy Bundy, 12-year-old daughter of famous Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, former national champion, as she made her major tournament debut with a surprise victory over Mrs. Marquis James of Rye, 6-4, 6-2. Critics are predicting she some day will regain the tennis crown which her mother wore for many years.

DASHING DIX CAST AS CAPTAIN IN ALL-TALKING

The story of the second Richard Dix all talking picture, "The Wheel of Life" based upon the successful stage play by James Bernard Fagan, was adapted for the screen by John Farrow, who did the adaptation or continuities of such screen hits as "Ladies of the Mob," "The Woman from Moscow," "Three Week Ends," "Wolf Song" and "A Dangerous Woman."

The action of "The Wheel of Life," which comes to the Saenger theatre for two days beginning today, shows Dix as Captain Yeullat, of the British service in India. A love affair develops between Yeullat and the young wife of his superior officer, an older man. Yeullat and the girl are parted when he gets a transfer to Tibet in order to prevent a scandal in the regiment. But they meet later when Dix goes to the rescue of British travelers who are besieged in an ancient Buddhist monastery high in the Himalayas.

The finale is one of the most amazing climaxes in the history of dramatics, according to critics who viewed the production.

Esther Ralston plays the feminine lead, and O. P. Heggie, famous Broadway star, plays the role of the elderly colonel.

The picture is 100 per cent talking and is a directorial production of Victor Schertzinger, the director who made "Forgotten Faces," "Nothing but the Truth" and many other renowned successes.

Heeney Trowned By Argentinian

Compolo Stages Slashing Come Back In Last Few Rounds.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Victorio Campolo, giant Argentine heavyweight, scored a sensational victory over Tom Heeney of New Zealand in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout here Thursday night, before a crowd of more than 20,000.

with the Austrian clearing house. Hungary's agent, Judge Alexius de Boer, is en route to his home, where he will prepare his final report and arrange for the deposit to cover his country's debt. This sum is estimated at $200,000.

Referee Jimmy Crowley stopped the contest after Heeney had been felled for a count of nine with a terrific right uppercut to the chin. His face badly cut up and covered with blood, Heeney was staggering helplessly around the ring when the contest was halted after two minutes and 46 seconds.

Coming back to outfight Heeney after the game New Zealander had carried the fight to him in the early rounds, Campolo set the crowd wild with furious fighting during the late rounds.

The towering Argentine took every punch Heeney had in the first four sessions and then had enough left to come from behind and win.

Heeney was twice on the floor. Campolo dropped him like a sack of cement in the eighth round with a hard right to the body. Heeney bounded back to his feet like a rubber ball without taking a count.

To The Public-

The management of the Capitol Hotel endorses, in its entirety, the resolution passed by the Hope American Legion Post.

We believe the annual Watermelon Festival to be one of the biggest and most helpful annual events in all Arkansas, to say nothing of the fame it brings to Hope and Hempstead County.

We were informed that it was customary to charge slightly advanced prices for meals on this occasion. We started out to charge $1.00 for chicken dinners, all other prices being the same as formerly. As soon as we learned we had been mis-informed, after less than a half dozen chicken dinners had been served, we restored the price to our regular chicken dinner charge. We did not charge extra for rooms.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS . . . By Laufer

BY WERNER LAUFER

DAVE SHADE, veteran of nearly 200 fights, is past his peak as fighting goes. He is already of the class of fighting troopers fast approaching the "trial-horse" stage.

But just a few years ago Dave, after fighting his way through the welterweight ranks, fell short of winning the championship, when a referee, influenced by Champion Mickey Walker's desperate last round rally, gave the decision against the California challenger and saved Walker's crown. After Dave had landed Mickey one of the worst lickings of his life.

He Squelches Critics

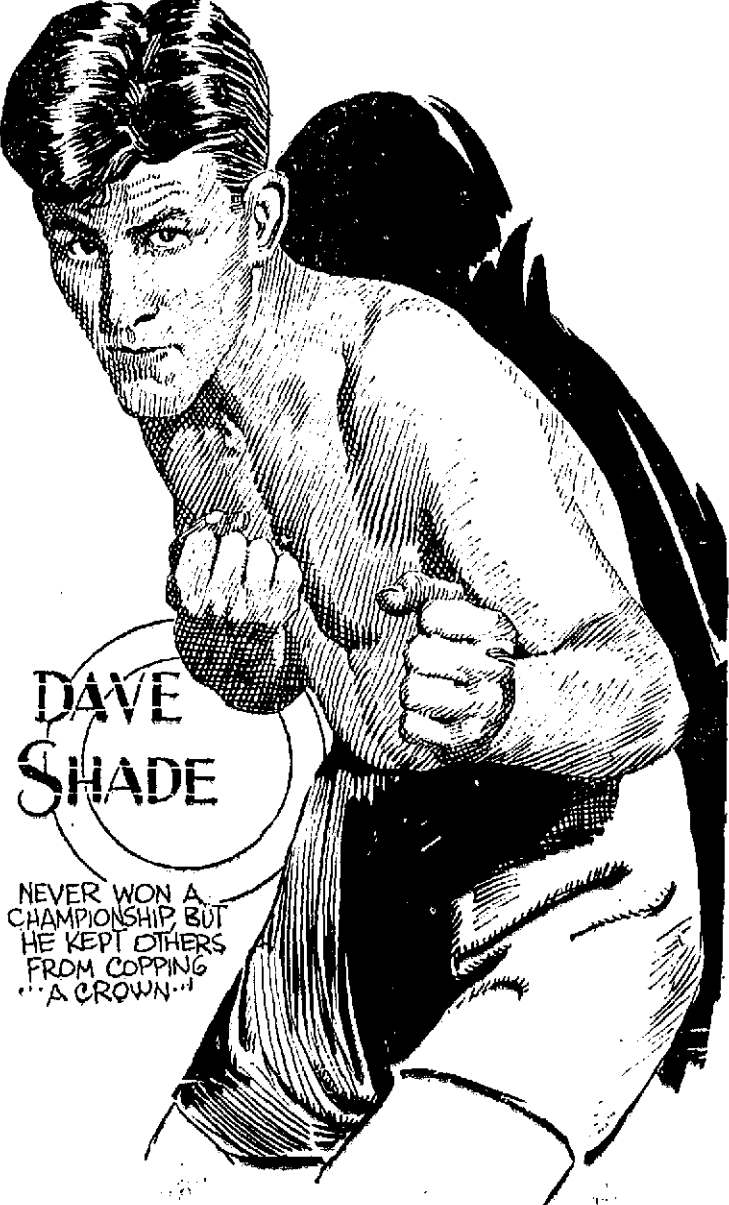

Since then Dave has never quite reached the peak again. But he has been ashen in the heat of more than one fighter who counted his champion chickens before they were hatched.

The most recent case of Dave exploding the rice pudding was when he whipped Rene DeVos in a torrid 10-rounder. DeVos had so originally been called the uncrowned king of the middleweights. They said he was the hardest hitter in his division.

True, he had lost to Ace Hudkins, but illness and poor condition had kept him from demonstrating his greatness. The boxing commission were considering him a heir to Mickey Walker's pawed crown jewels. He took on the clipping Shade for the exercise but Dave took him. Dave ducked and bobbed to the decision.

Slaps Slatery Silly

A few years ago out of Buffalo skyrocketed Jimmy Slatery. He was on his way to the light heavyweight title and nothing could stop him. Critics called him the class of his generation. He had everything, including patent leather hair and a capacity for lighter life. He was matched with Shade. It looked bad for the hair-jawed Dave, but when the fight came off Dave knocked him dead in the third round. Others have been sidetracked earlier in their climbs by Dave Shade. Others, too, have beaten him. But never a guy tagged as an uncrowned champion. Moral: If you're managing an uncrowned champion, steer clear of Dave Shade.
